

Kinecting to new frontiers

IMAGINE being able to take a trip to Disneyland whenever you fancy...

Well, that's exactly what's on offer from the new Kinect Disneyland Adventures Xbox 360 game.

Whether you've ever been to a park – or indeed played a computer game – this will transport you to the delights of Disney without leaving your living room.

The console's motion sensor means you become the controller and, coupled with the innovative directional roaming technology, it takes you on a virtual visit to a Disney wonder world.

Anyone can join in just by walking in front of the sensor - there's no complicated sign-in, just jump straight in and start playing. To move around, simply point at your destination and off you go!

Putting both arms up in the air brings the map with rides and park layout on-screen, or simply say where you want to go and Disney makes it happen.

Raise your hand and wave a wand towards sparkling furniture or scenery to bring it to life and reward you with glittering coins, or roar through a magic loudhailer to make buildings shake and wake sleeping characters!

Developed by the Kinectimals team, more than half the game is designed for discovering the park, while the rest focuses on the 12 rides and attractions with in-built multi games based on famous rides and characters.

There are also an incredible 300 character quests, such as a Goofy Wants To Be Mayor campaign, so all ages can play at different levels.

Peter Pan and Big Thunder

Mountain are rides that also have golden coins to catch and collect that add to the fun. A thoughtful touch from Disney for younger players is that there are no ways to lose – you simply drop out and reappear.

And you can hug any of over 45 Disney characters roaming the park, just hold your arms out to 'cuddle' Mickey or Goofy and have your picture taken with them.

The game features the original character voices and music from the Disney films, really adding to the authenticity.

So whether you prefer 'hugging' your favourite Disney characters or want to leap around escaping run away trains, big and little kids will adore this new ground-breaking Disneyland Adventures game for the Xbox 360 Kinect.
